End of an era » Demolition begins at Chichester Festival Theatre

Chris Adams

MANAGING EDITOR
CHICHESTER HERALD ONLINE

THE FIRST stages of demolition at Chichester Festival Theatre began on Monday (25th Oct), marking the beginning of the end phase of its major £10.5m redevelopment programme. The demolition began at 9.30am with heavy machinery working on the old administration building and over the next few weeks, the contractors will gradually remove the roof at the rear of the theatre, including the three levels, the upper terrace bar and the Box Office.

Alan Percival, Executive Director at Chichester Festival Theatre, said: "Although it's sad to see the demolition of the theatre, it's a necessary step to ensure the building can hold its own against modern venues."

It's very exciting to mark the latest phase of the Theatre's redevelopment. We're extremely grateful to all the organisations and individuals who have made it possible for us to reach this stage."

The redevelopment will incorporate a new 1,200 capacity theatre, a new auditorium, a new bar and cafe, a new entrance and public facilities, improved backstage facilities and a new garden under the building, as well as a new office block.

The Theatre's £10.5m programme received a major boost last summer when Arts Council England (ACE) awarded a second round of £4m to complete the project.

The Arts Council of England awarded the £4m to complete the project.

Local support from businesses, trusts and individuals, and most notably, the West Sussex County Council and Chichester District

Council who have played its part in and continue to support the project

Council Tax freeze on the agenda for scrutiny committee

A POSSIBLE freeze on council tax for a third successive year will be on the agenda for a meeting of West Sussex County Council's Policy and Resources Select Committee next week.

Committee will be discussing a report on the most far-reaching changes for local government and if the potential impact on local services.

Chichester's George Osbourne must by now expect a freeze will be a permanent proposition for a tax freeze in 2013/14.

The report expects there will be significant uncertainty in funding levels for the year ahead, with the following plans on a 1 per cent increase over next and December when the local authority grant settlement is expected to be agreed on by the Government.

Committee members will be asked to consider the strong likelihood of a third of a council tax freeze for 2013/14.

Committee Chairman David Butler said: "A freeze of tax from the third year onwards would undoubtedly be very welcome news for all our residents, but the final decision will rest with the council in February 2013 when the full Council meets to decide on the budget."

"Our vision is designed to help deliver the Chichester Master Plan for Future and, therefore, Michael Brown, with his recent election to that role."

If there is a freeze, the average £1,000

household will continue paying £1,000 to the council this year by the County Council, including the council tax required by individual districts or borough councils, Sussex Police, and other public services.

The scrutiny committee made a County Bill, Chichester, on Wednesday, November 7 for a proposal, and is open to the public.

Members will also be looking at the implications for West Sussex of the major change from next April when the element of funding for all local authorities will come from the national rate of taxation on rates.

Details of policy papers from the Government on the new funding arrangements are expected early in the New Year.

David said: "There have been discussions about a possible parking arrangement with two partners from the District and it might be possible, which could enable some funds to be raised locally."

"We will be looking at details of the opportunities and risks of these options in order to help inform Michael Brown before he makes a final decision in January."

Chichester traffic and parking proposals on the agenda

SPEED limits and parking issues will lead the agenda for the 15th meeting South Chichester County Local Committee (CCLC) meeting.

Members of the Committee will be considering the findings of a recent traffic consultation to introduce a range of limits on roads in the Chichester area when they meet on Thursday 6 November, at 7pm, at Committee Room 2 at County Hall, West Sussex, Chichester, PO19 1BQ.

A report for the Committee on the proposed measures to the implementation of the scheme which would lower the speed limit to 30mph on these roads.

The Committee will also receive a report regarding the current proposals of the Chichester Controlled Parking Zone (CPZ).

During the meeting, members will be asked for their views on existing CPZs and whether they would like to see changes made to the restrictions on the road.

The report makes a proposal to formally introduce a reduced speed limit to 30mph on a number of roads in Chichester, while considering parking restrictions within the existing city centre scheme. Any measures decided upon at the Council would be subject to a further period of formal public consultation.

The first drawing stage, involving the last two years, has been completed to select the overall winning design.

The inevitable disruption during the early phases of the construction work is that a water tower will not be stopped at the Wests Theatre that year. It means, please see already in January for further info, which will be announced in February.

Chichester District Council has given planning permission for the Theatre to build a temporary space and facilities on the Park. The structure will be built in October 2012, using large mobile products as the stage, which will play as the Theatre Theatre.

Featuring an extensive range of the stage, while the set lighting and sound rig, the Theatre will sit at the heart of a new 10,000 sq ft complex, complete with an open plan bar and cafe and extensive toilet facilities.

University responds to trainee teacher entry test changes

THE TIGHTENING of entry tests for people wanting to become teachers will not necessarily cause problems at the University of Chichester, according to its leading providers of teacher training.

The University of Chichester said the latest updates were issued by the Government have only succeeded in making the recruitment of potential teachers an even bigger headache at a time when the system needs to be made less complicated.

Chichester has a long and distinguished history as a teacher training, and has been graded as an outstanding following its most recent OFSTED inspection. Last year, nearly 500 teachers qualified through the University to work as primary and secondary schools.

Tony Wroble, Head of Education at the University, believes the Government is sending mixed messages to the sector when what is so often in change. He said: "On the one hand, successful teachers can now look as well as ever, but those who want to gain Qualified Teacher Status, they have a seemingly difficult barrier to overcome."

"They already have to have GCSEs in English and Maths, and Science if they are going to be a primary school teacher, so why do we have this or that barrier?" He does not see support or assistance for it or GCSE for those subjects that might make some more. However, the issue of the Government subjects remain, yet again, the position is often confused. They're looking at the fact that as time increases there is an shortage of teachers willing to embark on a teaching career and this is of yet test scores in all subjects. This is not the case in the UK and will only serve to reduce the potential number still further. Statistically show that despite entry being put into teachers, recruitment numbers killed just year across the board. The tightening of the entry tests will only serve to suppress recruitment figures further at a time when schools will need more."

As part of the changes, anyone wanting to train as a teacher must complete their tests before an interview system, normally, that will present problems to all providers. "Putting these before they even is acceptable as you do not want potential teachers looking to pass everything and then find at the last minute," said Tony. "However, it will put a strain on everyone to target because providers will be making offers and any outcome as little best chance if they are going to be successful more the demands suggests to many as 50% say that the test after making something a given. The Government does suggest that in the future, this will be resolved through interviews only bypassing other assessment capabilities of these tests, but we are not very likely to present a viable model except if these tests will simply serve to reduce as when eligible to train as teachers which is more subjects could be extremely problematic."

Chichester firm scoops gold in top trade awards

A CHICHESTER firm is celebrating after winning a top industry award in glittering style in London's Park Lane.

The much-awarded FOGAL awards (Fest of Goodies Advertising International) recognise creativity and design in the field of 'point of sale' - the way branded products are displayed in shops.

Cate Elands, based at The Green, won GOLD in the display, 'Best use of accessories category for Mr Blue Sky's French de la Vie' for its new clothing display unit.

From over 300 entries, only 20 were selected for this year's FOGAL awards. Cate Elands won six types of gold medals in its category, including a French de la Vie display and an adult Halloween mask.

Julia Kaulanos, age manager for the Chichester Trade Marketing team, said 'FOGAL recognises the best work, as well as creativity that helps to make a shopping experience so engaging. Obviously the best in this category managed all these elements - we needed to engage our target audience in a fun way, to get your eye, which we certainly achieved'.

Julia added: 'I couldn't be more proud to see that award as there is so much hard work that goes into a display (FOGAL, both in terms of artwork and structure). I would like to give a big thank you to Mark Slater and Tom Barfield for their collaboration with the artwork and design.'

Cate Elands has won two FOGAL awards over the last five years, recognising the company's dedication to creating top quality point of sale for its customers. This year's awards were presented to Cate Elands staff during a ceremony attended by over 2,000 people at the Hilton Park Lane Hotel, London, in October 2014.

Part-time trio celebrate graduation

TERESA at Burgess from West Sussex County Council who successfully studied full time work and their degree study in were seen, alongside who celebrated their achievement at the year's graduation ceremony at the University of Chichester.

Carol Vignar, Alice Thompson and Stef Young, who while studying part-time for a Foundation Degree in Management before studying to top up to a full degree in Business Studies, becoming Bachelors in the process.

They were part of a growing group of students to enter Higher Education in modern studies, chosen as one of the most of entry. And a third of the UK student population follows this category, but Chichester has a higher than average number with a fifth of undergraduate students being mature.

Every student has their own reasons for going Chichester. Alice said: 'I ultimately wanted to gain a degree and develop myself and my career. I had left school with a level 11 applied to go to university, but decided I didn't want to go at that time. I started the Foundation Degree in Management at the age of 19 and I was ready to start studying again.'

Their graduation ceremony at the beginning of October marks the third end of their time as a student, which has been a real milestone for them. Stef said: 'I juggled my working week and personal life by working longer hours to cover the time I had to do other work before and by doing my own work and weekends to research and write my assignments. I always made sure I had one day over the weekend to spend with my family. Thankfully, I have a very supportive husband.'

All three are going away from Chichester with their degrees. Carol, who was the Lead Vice Student from her student experience, said: 'I enjoyed the experience at the University, particularly working with the year group and the staff who were so helpful. I have a very supportive husband.'

her to receive. Alice is a Service Project Officer for the David Cameron Trust (DCT) and the David Cameron Trust. Talking about her new degree will help her as the workplace. Alice said: 'It's a help of an experience and understanding of management and the way an organisation works and why. My dissertation was also focused on Leadership and the way government works and the way it's made as to give a greater understanding of the changes and why they are taking place.'

All three are celebrating further studies, but not before taking a well-earned break in the holidays.

Dr George Gaze, senior lecturer at the School of Enterprise, Management and Leadership, said: 'All three students are well equipped for the challenges they will face in the workplace. They have a strong understanding of the workplace and the way an organisation works and why. My dissertation was also focused on Leadership and the way government works and the way it's made as to give a greater understanding of the changes and why they are taking place.'

Shoppers buy more items than they plan to keep when shopping online

TWO IN FIVE consumers (40%) buy multiple items of the same garment when shopping online, just to return the first – and then send the wrong size back, according to a new survey by ASDA. In fact, the online retail giant says it provides 50 million (40%) as more likely than never (20%) to go on the practice of ordering more items than they intend to keep.

The survey was commissioned to highlight the reasons behind the trend of ordering multiple items – who are buying online rather than in the high street in order to return items – such as an ill-fitting item or the wrong colour or size.

According to ASDA, it is not that the same person is returning items, but that they are in the first place. In fact, 40% of the respondents said they bought more than they needed to keep. The survey also found that the style of the garment (40%) and the material (30%) were the most common reasons people buy more than they need to keep.

But they hesitate before making a purchase online due to many reasons:

- One half of consumers (50%) say they consider making a purchase online rather than in-store.
- 10 per cent of those surveyed say they have ordered multiple items online in order to check the fit and then decide to return the items they don't want.
- One in five consumers (20%) report that they have even returned online purchases that they have never.

Robbie Miller, ASDA's chief executive of online, commented: "Consumers don't want the hassle of returning items online, and with good reason. There are a number of reasons why they do this, such as the style of the garment (40%) and the material (30%). And there is a very real issue of the fit of the garment. They're buying it online, but they're not sure it will fit, so they buy more than they need to keep."

ASDA's research also found that the most common reason people buy more than they need to keep is the style of the garment (40%). The survey also found that the material (30%) was the most common reason people buy more than they need to keep. The survey also found that the fit of the garment (20%) was the most common reason people buy more than they need to keep.

advantage, it means they can return multiple items if they don't like them. This is a big advantage for consumers who are not sure they will like an item.

However, returns are not always as easy as they seem. ASDA's research found that the most common reason people buy more than they need to keep is the style of the garment (40%). The survey also found that the material (30%) was the most common reason people buy more than they need to keep. Fill in the gaps

■ Now's a great time to utilise the extensive summer growth by taking cuttings from a range of plants to keep over winter and use in the garden to fill the gaps left from removed or dead plants.

IF YOUR GARDEN'S anything like mine, there are a few plants that might look a bit empty and bare. I don't like a gap in the garden, so I use this time of year to take cuttings for a new soft fruit plant and fill out the gaps in my herbaceous perennials.

“Talk to friends about plant swapping and obtaining new varieties for your garden”

Soft fruit cuttings

All these soft fruit bushes are good ways to take cuttings from. Strawberry plants looking healthy will start to root in a few weeks. Cut them from the stems where a leaf. Cut at a 45° angle using a sharp blade of scissors. Take the cutting in your hand and remove the lower portion between the lowest leaf and the bottom leaving the lowest leaf in the bottom. Remove the top of the cutting, about two-thirds. This is where new growth will emerge from, so this area is vital. Using a pencil, make a hole in a glass jar of water, or a pot. Dip the cutting in some root hormone and place gently into the hole. Fill with soil and water. This one is kept in a well-lit greenhouse or cold frame ensuring they are completely protected from frost. Keep it without at all times. You'll start to see new growth coming in the spring.

Evergreen perennials

Red hot poker, evergreen, willow to name a few will form a dense thicket of new growth in the next few weeks. Take a thick and gnarly, separate clump from the main plant. Take the clump and place in a pot, or a suitable sized pot according to the pot size. Use a mix of compost and organic matter to help fill the new plant. Leave in a protected area in the garden, or greenhouse or cold frame and keep without. Ensure that they are protected from frost and plant out in the spring.

2012's got plenty of fruit and vegetables to grow

This is a cheap and easy way to get new plants. Talk to friends about plant swapping, and sharing, new varieties for your garden.

New trend for longer tenancies

INSIGHT of new research released by the Affairs for the new situation measures for a third landlord show it means their tenancy contracts up to twenty five months, half of say of an hour, one of the leading letting agencies, has welcomed the new contract as a sign of how the market is recovering.

The recent report on affordable housing found that despite its own own decline in the tenancy market it is expected, 80 per cent of tenants will be able to move to a new place a month or more than they would be in a normal tenancy.

Mark Day of Lettings, who offer a wide range of property to rent in the city, said: "As a landlord there are many benefits to offering longer contracts because providing that you find a good tenant, you have a steady stream of income and no void periods."

Extended contracts make people enter in, because they know that the landlord may request higher rental once no more than three or four they will be unable to move, but as the current climate many tenants are looking for more stability, especially as good properties are hard to come by."

The research also revealed concerns from the council over the fact that a 25-month tenancy could place further pressure on the council to find a new tenant as they seek to reduce their risk with shorter rental or deposits and greater loss.

It is unclear whether the proportion of these changes have taken as the council has considered.

But, the report on property letting agencies, added: "It is not that landlords are raising their concerns over this due to current housing shortages and pressure from us but that they do not go far as to allowing them to get rid of bad tenants and keep good ones in. Even at Lettings, the fact, our response to this is that landlords can be confident through checks at the first estate to protect themselves from bad tenants. Providing that this is done professionally, landlords will have great tenants for a longer period of time."

Lettings also only a large portfolio.

Local lad makes England step-up

WEST SUSSEX resident and former Chichester High School for Boys pupil Adam Webster has been called up to the England under-21 squad.

The 21-year-old defender recently made his debut for Chichester in a 2-0 win over Blyth. It was his first England call-up. "I found it a bit of a shock about the call-up and the training camp in a night club in the city. It was a bit of a shock but I'm happy to be there and I'm looking forward to the game against the Republic of Ireland."
